I tried using this and they only looks like this: As you can see, it doesn't look like the screenshot I found and I'd like it to look like the one I found in Photoshop and it looks like this in the picture: Here's my code: NotepadIcon.psd A: The screenshot you found is a PNG image, not an EPS. If you want to make a generic icon, with an icon of pencil, you'll need to get a PNG or EPS image of the icon you want and edit the icon in your image editor of choice. Once you've edited the icon to look like the icon you want, you'll then need to convert it to a.PNG or.EPS file using whatever you use to convert images. (GIMP is probably the most popular.) I'd suggest you create a new image with the best pencil icon you can find. Save the image in your image editor of choice, then save the image in a format that you use. (GIMP can export to all common formats.) Then you'll be able to edit the icon in your image editor, convert the image to a.PNG or.EPS format, and use the.EPS or.PNG file. See my answer to a question about editing icon files. Quantitative proteome analysis of the heart in experimental diabetes. Diabetes is a disease characterized by elevated blood glucose levels resulting from a relative or absolute lack of insulin secretion from the pancreas. Cardiac tissue and its constituent proteins are targets of diabetic damage, but the identity and relative abundance of proteins within the cardiac proteome and their modulation by diabetic complications is unknown. The present study was performed to identify and quantify changes in the heart proteome during experimental diabetes. Male C57BL/6 mice were divided into two groups of equal size and treated with either saline or streptozotocin (STZ) to induce diabetes. Mice were sacrificed after 21 days of treatment. Proteins extracted from left ventricular myocardial tissue were separated and subjected to LC-MS/MS analysis. From 967 identified proteins, 98 were differentially expressed in diabetic hearts relative to controls. Changes in diabetic hearts
