Lama Temple (Kolkata) Lama Temple or Nava Narayan Temple is located in Shyambazar of Kolkata, India. The masonry structure of this temple is built in the Indo-Saracenic architecture style and believed to be built by Haji Raja Ram Singha. The premises of this temple was converted into the headquarters of the Zamindar office in 1837. The deity of this temple is a replica of the 1853 statue of Vishnu preserved in Srijanatha temple at Shankaraghata in West Bengal. History It was believed that while the original Nava Narayan, either a Hindu saint or a Muslim saint or both, were maintaining a temple at this place, the soldiers of the Mughal Army stormed the temple and destroyed all the idols. The present structure was later built as a memorial to the original Vishnu statue. Architecture This temple was built in 1853 by the Zamindar of Patunje, Haji Raja Ram Singha of the Singha Patna family. It is built in Indo-Saracenic style, a blend of the Mughal and Indo-Aryan architecture. The temple has a single storey and a central hall covered with a dome. There are two smaller temples, one on either sides of the main temple. It is a replica of the 1853 statue of Vishnu preserved in Srijanatha temple at Shankaraghata in West Bengal. Mary McLeod Bethune was born on January 12, 1875, in "the backwoods of the Carolinas," in a log cabin where her father and his wife, her mother and siblings lived. The cabin was on an Indian reservation, where her parents worked as carpenters. In her autobiography, she said, "How could I have been so blind? I should have seen it long before; but to me, as a child, the situation was so strange. It was quite obvious that they could not keep the Indians who were camped about them a safe distance away from them." By the time Bethune was ten, she was working as a field hand, as were the other children in her family. In school, she sat in the back of the room. As she grew older, she was given a series of chores to do as punishment for her truancy. At one point, she received a choice—either work in the fields for three days or face arrest for being "incorrigible." Her story is one of the many "dual" lives the historian Jacquelyn Dow
