Armenia ready for additional Chinese aid ARMENIAN government officials have welcomed a more substantial commitment of Chinese aid, though their fear it will come at the end of an EU-backed aid program that ended last year. China will host an international conference to help Armenia seek further financial assistance from abroad in March, a ministry official said. According to the Armenian Foreign Ministry, Azerbaijan is expected to announce support for a major reconstruction project in Armenia's capital of Yerevan, while Russia will pledge $22 million to help cover medical treatment for Armenian refugees in its southern Russian republic of Karabakh. Nashville Predators defenseman Seth Jones may have taken a big step toward making the team, but he hasn't been able to get his brother to make the cut. Jones earned his first NHL-career start on Thursday in a road game against the Dallas Stars, and the defenseman spoke highly of his performance, in spite of not being at full strength. But his most important game of the preseason came right before the NHL's trading deadline in early September, when he played with the team he called home for a week following a promotion to the NHL, and a week where he could showcase himself for the rest of the world to see. But, despite getting back into the lineup, his brother, Brady, was not in the team's locker room at any point. "Me and Seth are actually pretty close," Brady Jones told the Tennessean prior to the Nashville Predators' preseason opener. "He's the big brother, and he'd do anything for me. It's sad that I'm not playing with him because he's really close to me, but that's the professional world. It's a long season and, it's hard to break into the lineup, and it's just tough." His brother's return to NHL at the last possible moment also didn't come without the Predators wanting a player-for-player swap for future considerations. "I don't think we had a chance to do that, because I think Seth was working his way in," Predators general manager David Poile said prior to the start of Thursday's game. "We had the privilege of having him for five weeks, and he was a great addition. But if he was going to come in and play in our league, it would have to be through some sort of trade." So, instead, Seth showed off his maturity in a big way, getting a

From a business perspective, it makes sense for us to assume that we should not sell below cost to any customer. We do not want the perception that we are getting away with selling products below cost to any customer. However, if we need to sell to a customer at a pre-determined discounted price to meet their requirements, we do have the capability to do so. Generally speaking, we do not want to sell below cost because of our desire to increase our market share. 2. A spreadsheet of fuel price increases is attached.
